New 007 film was on general release in cinemas across Nigeria on 6 November. On Wednesday November 4, British High Commissioner, Paul Arkwright, hosted an exclusive VIP premiere of the new James Bond film, 'SPECTRE'.

The screening was preceded by a glitzy event, with guests taking to a specially created “green carpet”, reflecting Nigeria's national colour as well as celebrating the two joint hosts and Official Partners of SPECTRE (Jaguar Land Rover and Heineken) whose corporate colours are both green.

'SPECTRE' is Bonds twenty-fourth cinematic adventure, and has been hailed the most expensive 007 film to date, costing 200 million pounds ($300 million).

Connie Price, British Council Country Director comments: 'Tonight's screening of SPECTRE was a great success and an excellent example of British arts and culture. Seeing the buzz around the film was, for me, a perfect way to kick-off our participation in Africa International Film Festival (AFRIFF), which starts next week.'
